

A BIGGER SPLASH

AFONSOUL

AT RAW CULTURE, LISBOA 2023

CURATED BY JOÃO VILELA.

Every story has a beginning, this is it.
Everything which starts small grows into something which some call ambition, others vision, and the lucky ones imagination.

This story starts in Santos, by the mighty Atlantic on the Brazilian coast, and then cross^{es} es over to Portugal.

A small kid, who watched every sunset he could (and still does), grew up thinking that all those saturated reds, yellows, pinks and oranges with overshots of blue, should mean something (at least they meant for meteorologists).

Many years after, he found that through spray can and paint brushes, walls and canvas, paper or concrete, they meant something new.

The work of AFONSOUL is part Wizard of Oz in which he did go over the rainbow in terms of colours and textures, and part RAW in which he still finds the rough around the edges interesting.

The kid from Santos is now a grown up in Lisbon (still with great hair which he cut a bit shorter for the Opening Night) after several stints in European cities painting walls and making art installations which have left a mark in thousands of people.

Paint has that power, to leave something effective for others to think and talk about.

And it always poses a challenge: What's behind it?

That's still the kid from Santos looking at yet another sunset. And that's what so good about him.

This is his story, and in many ways, ours too.
